

ANNA LEONILDE BUCARELLI

PhD Student – Sapienza
University of Rome, XL Ciclo

PROFILE

I am a PhD Student in Philosophy at Sapienza University in Rome. I am currently working on a project on the moral question of the world in Kant's late practical writings, in relation to the world-concept of philosophy and the radicalization of the practical primacy in the Opus postumum.

For my Master's thesis, I focused on the early reception of Kantianism in Germany, with particular reference to the figure of Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi.

I obtained a Double Master's degree specializing in German Idealism between Sapienza University of Rome and the University of Jena, where I had the opportunity to study the themes of classical German philosophy in the original language and to explore the post-Kantian landscape up to Hegel.
